FOREWORD

WE again extend felicitations to the student body on their third presentation of THE EXCELSIOR. Special felicitations to the Seniors who were wholly responsible for making this edition a mammoth success. We wish also to thank our many patrons and contributors who have helped tremendously. It is our aim that every contributor and reader may become thoroughly acquainted with our efforts and activities.

The day is past in which a young man or woman without specific training can enter an office for an apprenticeship in business and hope to succeed. The grandparents of this generation could do that. Today the employer wants only those who can sell to him a skill, an ability, a service upon which he can make a profit.

Payne's Business & Secretarial School offers the specialized training that fits the young person for immediate employment and prepares him for promotions. Its function is not to provide the fundamental general education of the public school, nor the cultural education of the college, but to supplement these two with a practical specialized training for vocational purposes. It prepares the pupil to make a living in the business world.

This specialized training will do two things: Make the trainee employable and enable him to begin his career at a higher wage level. Money spent for this type of training is, therefore, a definite investment.

Business has become a profession, requiring a degree of preparation equal to that of many older professions, and offering as attractive opportunities as the best of them. Payne's Business School has endeavored to move upward with business in its climb to the professional level. Courses have been broadened and enriched to satisfy the requirements of both vocational and professional institutions. Today our school has one dominant objective: To train young people for successful careers in the professions of business. For the accomplishment of this purpose it strives to do five things:

1. Lay a foundation of specific fundamental education upon which a business can be erected.

2. Develop certain vocational skills in the pupil to the degree of proficiency measures.

3. Broaden the outlook of the pupil until he is able to visualize possibilities in business and career.

4. Develop business habits and personalities, character which will provide a place of leadership in this profession.

5. The courses of our school meet two exacting requirements . . . the demands of the employers, and the standards set up by educators.

To our Seniors of '47 I leave this advice: There are qualities of mind and character you must possess before you can make the best use of your technical skill. Diligence, initiative, vision, a keen alertness, judgment. These you must have and exercise before success will be within your reach, and these are qualities that Payne's Business & Secretarial School has taught you, and we are confident that you will live up to each of these ideals. By so doing, success will be your reward.

Mrs. F. P. PAYNE, President.

DEDICATION

The Class of '47 proudly dedicates this year's annual to our parents, patrons and friends.

We wholeheartedly dedicate this annual as a token of our appreciation of your sacrifices in helping us to climb higher in life.

CLASS POEM

Here's a tribute to dear old Payne's,
The school of our ideal;
Here's a tribute to the ones who guided us,
And will be with us still;
We'll think of you, wherever we shall be,
Payne's Business School we'll always cherish thee;
Though years may come and years may go,
We'll love thee more and more.

There have to be loyal hearts and also spirits brave,
But at dear old Payne's you complete all the grades,
To achieve these things and reach success,
Out into the world looking for the best;
But now the time has come for us to leave,
We shall always strive to achieve.

CLASS HISTORY

In the month of January 1946 a new class was in the making at Payne's Business & Secretarial School to venture into the field of business.

As members of this beginning class, we found a hearty welcome coming from the upper class and a warm reception from the president, Mrs. F. P. Payne, and her assistant instructor, Miss Louise Williams.

At this time we were no longer the young tots entering school for the first time, but we are those who have graduated from high school. Some of us have even studied in various colleges. At this age, and with the knowledge that we have acquired throughout our school days up until now, we are the so-called "cream of the crop" stepping out as youngsters into the field of business.

We began to make short but sturdy strides into the field, under the guidance of our competent instructor who labored so strenuously to help cultivate our brain to such an extent that we would be able to master shorthand, bookkeeping, typing, and all the other subjects that always confront a beginner in the business world.

Making a most intelligent survey of the students enrolled at Payne's Business & Secretarial School, we found that the students were hailed from all parts of the State, but all of them seem to have the same determination, and that is the will to achieve.

During the first few months through studious efforts we were able to master the first books in our beginning course, and with the help of our instructor we were able to attain the marks which would qualify us for our senior instructor.

In the month of April, the class was organized. Mr. Norman E. Smith was elected president, Mr. William D. Henry, vice-president, Miss Frances Moore as secretary, and Miss Nannie Banks as treasurer.

Throughout the spring months we struggled upward toward our goal. Although the work was hard, yet we found time for our social events which included the most delectable prom held at the Y.M.C.A. In the latter part of May, while the upper class was preparing themselves for the final initiative before entering the business world, the undergraduates were striving with the best of their ability to follow in the footsteps of those who had gone on before them.

On the 24th of June the school closed for the season of 1946. Before we put away our books for our summer vacation we had been cautioned by our instructors not to let the knowledge we had built up during the first part of our course at Payne's Business & Secretarial

School to corrode before we returned to school again in the fall. Upon resuming our course in the fall session, our hearts were overjoyed to learn that a host of new students had cast their lot with us, to venture into the field of business.

One of the most outstanding events of the year was the big celebration of Founder's Day. The entire school was served a delicious repast. Following the repast Mr. Brown, the speaker for that honorable day, delivered an address which was a great inspiration to the entire school.

As time marched on the class was reorganized with Mr. William D. Henry as president, Mrs. Christine Stewart as vice-president, Miss Esther Perry as secretary, and Miss Nannie Banks as treasurer. The entire class co-operated with the new officers to the fullest extent, which enabled them to perform the duties which were required of them.

As the time for graduating is drawing nigh, we find ourselves looking back over the ground that we had covered since we first entered school at Payne's Business & Secretarial School. In making the final check of the students that started out in the race, we find that only a few held out until the end. For various reasons those that did not keep the pace dropped out one by one until the number of graduates were cut down to its present status. We must always bear in mind that fortune favors those who never give up until the race is finished.

Last but not least, the graduating class of 1947 has been one of the most outstanding classes in the history of the school.

CLASS SONG

All hail to thee, dear Payne's!

The time has come to say "Good-bye"

To friends and teachers, kind and true,

And dear old Payne's Business School.

We leave thee with hope and fear,

Leave with smile and sigh;

Oh, give to us a word of cheer!

As we must say "Good-bye."

The time that was spent in this school

Has not been spent in fun;

But now that graduation calls,

We know our work is done.

MARY ELIZABETH VANDERGRIF, '47.

LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT

Mr. William Henry wills to Mr. Eunique Whitaker his dignity, and his bookkeeping ability.

Miss Esther Perry wills her ladylike ways to Miss Marjorie Buie, and her position as lunchroom keeper to Miss Lucy Blackwell.

Mrs. Johnsic Jones wills to Mr. Owen Chandler the Black Dictionary.

Mrs. Hazel Simms wills her shorthand ability to Miss Annie Leach.

Miss Jessie Niles wills her quietness and her pleasing personality to Miss Marjorie Buie.

Mrs. Christine Stewart wills her form and height to Miss Perlene McDonald.

Mr. Charles Henry wills his co-operative attitude to Mr. William Jones.

Miss Willor Alston wills her quietness to Miss Gladys Nicholson.

Mr. Edgar McClain wills his businesslike ways to Mr. Andrew Shaw.

Mrs. Luverdis Maye wills her courage and ambition to Mrs. Lular Taylor.

Mr. Norman Smith wills his businesslike ways to Mr. Owen Chandler.

LUVERDIS MAYE, '47.

CLASS PROPHECY

Greetings and salutations from the students of the graduation class of '47. We finish this course with a sense of well-being and accomplishment. As we emerge from this institution of knowledge, our minds are centered on one thing: what does the future hold for us? Well, let us take a trip on the magic carpet of time and see what's cooking for us.

Our carpet lands first of all in a little town in Pennsylvania, Trafford to be exact. There as we wander down the main street, who should we see but Miss Esther Perry. From Miss Perry's conversation, we find that she is director of the local chapter of the American Red Cross. We know that all problems brought to Miss Perry are handled with the utmost care.

Traveling southward we stop in Virgilina, Virginia, where we find Mr. Norman Smith, a former student of Payne's Secretarial School, has a thriving business. There, also, we find Miss Mary Vandergriff as Mr. Smith's private secretary.

Continuing the journey southward, we stop again in Wise, N. C. We find Miss Virgie Garmes as manager of the city's largest department store.

Raleigh, N. C., next stop. Here we find a host of former classmates. Mrs. Luverdis Maye as owner of a small but select millinery shop; Miss Josephine Birdsall as a competent bookkeeper for a local department store; Miss Pollie Watson as a secretary in an insurance office; Miss Hazel Simms as assistant to Mrs. F. P. Panc, president of our former Alma Mater; Miss Jessie Niles as circulating manager of the Carolinian, our local newspaper.

Stopping in High Point, N. C., we see Miss Dorothy Pullen as director of child welfare there.

In Erwin, N. C., we find Miss Letha Elliot, as bookkeeper for the largest fruit company in the city.

Newton Grove, the home of the Messers. William and Charles Henry, has enjoyed a wider variety of dry goods since the Henry Brothers Department Store was established.

In Fayetteville, N. C., we were entertained by Mrs. Marjorie Dunn, who is competently holding down a job as manager of the ladies' ready-to-wear section of a big department store.

Miss Nannie Banks puts her excellent bookkeeping skill to work in her home town, Como, N. C., in the Federal Reserve Bank there.

Miss Willor Alston who hails from Louisburg, N. C., finds her work as secretary to a prominent lawyer very interesting.

Mr. Edgar McLean, who finally decided on law as a career, has opened law offices in Lillington, N. C., and is doing a rushing business.

Miss Pauline Douglas, of Hamlet, N. C., is distinguishing herself as bookkeeper and secretary to the dean of girls at Livingston College.

In Wilmington, N. C., we find Miss Montrose Whitley as an English instructor, and assistant to the dean of women at the local high school.

Now we take a long trip. All the way down to San Diego, California, to visit Miss Johnsie Anderson who has an interesting position as chief clerk in an importing firm.

Well, this old magic carpet is just about worn out for now, so we make our departure, leaving behind us to all those we visited, our best wishes for their continued success.

CHRISTINE S. STEWART.

IT'S DEFINITELY A GREAT DAY WHEN—

Pauline Douglass stops sitting in the lunch room chatting with Mary Vandergriff.

Pollie Watson gets all of her transcriptions in the morning.

Esther Perry stops thinking of personal affairs and gets down to work.

Mary Vandergriff stops walking at 11:25, for lunch, and at 3:25 in the afternoon.

Montrose Whitley remembers when and what to say at the right time and at the right place.

Dorothy Pullen isn't cheerful at all times.

Johnsie A. Jones uses a dictionary other than the black one.

Lethia Elliott stops clearing her throat before responding in shorthand.

Christine Stewart stops humming: "That's How Much I Love You."

William Henry decides to talk without being forced.

Luverdis Maye fails to talk to Marjorie Dunn.

Willor Alston decides to stop whispering and speak out so she can be heard.

Virgie Garnes stops tipping around.

Charles Henry stops grinning at every girl in the class.

Marjorie Dunn fails to read correctly her shorthand.

Edgar McClain comes to school on bookkeeping day.

Nannie Banks learns the meaning of a word.

Josephine Birdsall doesn't wear flowers in her hair.

Pauline Douglass
Marjorie Dumm
William Henry

Luverdis Maye
Esther Perry
Dorothy Pullen
Montrose Whitley

Hazel Simms
Christine Stewart
Mary Vandergriff

Students eligible for membership in this honor society have maintained an average of "B" throughout their scholastic business training. They are well acquainted with the importance of general office procedure and office management.

They are of good character and possess the qualities that make the efficient secretary and receptionist.

Several students in this group have maintained an average of "A" but to be eligible for membership an average of "B" or over is the prerequisite.

The following members were absent at the time of this pose: Marjorie Dumm, Luverdis Maye, Hazel Simms and Dorothy Pullen.

MISS LOUISE A. WILLIAMS, Faculty Adviser.

SUPPOSE . . .

Edgar McLean wasn't an "A" student in English!

Johnsie A. Jones lost her "appetite"!

Dorothy Pullen would leave her fancy "ear bobs" at home!

Montrose Whitley didn't stay out of school to take her "beauty rest"!

Charles Henry would be serious sometimes!

Pollie Watson would come to school before 12:00 on bookkeeping days!

Virgie Barnes wouldn't say in conversation, "Don't get too personal"!

William Henry wasn't a good speller!

Mary Vandergriff wasn't "bubbling over" with mischief and nonsense at all times!

Pauline Douglass wouldn't put on more make-up at the close of school day!

Willor Alston's friend wouldn't have a ear waiting for her at the close of school on rainy days!

Josephine Birdsall didn't go to the Varsity every day for lunch!

Nannie Banks would attend school every day!

Esther Perry didn't have a pleasing personality!

Christine S. Stewart wouldn't go home every day at 12:00!

Luverdis Maye wasn't herself at all times!

Marjorie Dunn wouldn't make "A" in all subjects!

Lethia Elliot became interested in "dates"!

Norman Smith didn't like to talk to the girls!

Hazel Simms couldn't have a good argument with Johnsie A. Jones!

ESTHER PERRY, '47.

UNDERGRADUATES

We, the undergraduates of Payne's Business & Secretarial School, are eager to express our wishes to Mrs. F. P. Payne and Miss Louise A. Williams for their thorough training and guidance to us during our commercial course.

To the class of 1947, we wish for you great success in your future career, and hope that you will always remember the interest and courteous attitude you received from your instructors.

Throughout our training we shall strive to keep our standards as our foregoing classmates have done.

SCHOOL MASCOT

Seen at school each day during the school year is the faithful little pedigreed cocker spaniel belonging to Little Miss Carmen Payne. This little dog is recognized as "Little Miss Ebony Payne." It is noted with much interest how Ebony knows each student, and how she announces visitors, distinguishing them from the large student body attending school here.

Ebony is asked quite frequently, "Are you a student?" In so many words Ebony's answer might be, "Yes, but not for a degree, because I already have a pedigree."

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million (15.5% of the population).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people, and the Government has set out a strategy for the 21st century in the White Paper on Ageing Better: A Strategy for the 21st Century (Department of Health, 1999). This sets out a vision of a society in which older people are able to live well, and to contribute to society. The White Paper sets out a number of key objectives, including: to improve the health and well-being of older people; to support older people to live independently; to ensure that older people are able to participate in society; and to ensure that older people are able to live in their own homes.

The White Paper also sets out a number of key actions to be taken to achieve these objectives, including: to improve the health and well-being of older people; to support older people to live independently; to ensure that older people are able to participate in society; and to ensure that older people are able to live in their own homes. The White Paper also sets out a number of key actions to be taken to achieve these objectives, including: to improve the health and well-being of older people; to support older people to live independently; to ensure that older people are able to participate in society; and to ensure that older people are able to live in their own homes.
